

Dr. Juliet Ibrahim

Dr. Juliet Ibrahim is currently the Director of eHealth in the Ministry of Public Health, Qatar, where she is working on developing national systems and integration platforms for connecting information across the health sector; including the establishment of a national health information exchange and central data repository.

She has worked in Qatar's government health care system for over 15 years; leading and working in different areas related to planning, strategy and policy at the ministry level, including leading the development of the National Health Strategy 2011-2016, and National Health Strategy 2018-2022.

She is a physician by background, having received her Family Medicine Specialty Training at Georgetown University in Washington DC, followed by a Fellowship in Health Center Director Development, and Health Systems Administration.